

THE RITZ-CARLTON, CANCUN DRESSES IN PINK

During October, in support to the fight against breast cancer, the luxurious lobby of The Ritz-Carlton, Cancun, will be painted pink with floral decorations that will lead guests and visitors to D-Lounge; An ideal place to have cocktails before or after dinner, with creative and innovative mixology and personalized service.

As part of this campaign, the renowned mixologist Carlos Arellano Quetzal created a commemorative cocktail in pink, named Colibri, after a Mexican bird that symbolizes love, joy and beauty. For its preparation, Carlos uses Gin Tanqueray, Belvedere Vodka, pineapple juice, aquafaba, basil leaves, tonic water and cabbage syrup, an ingredient that gives the cocktail a striking pink color; as a final touch, is decorated with two edible flowers.

Additionally, Fantino, one of the AAA Five Diamond fine dining restaurants of the property, will include in its menu a charming dish that contains ingredients studied in prestigious universities of the world for their contribution in the fight against breast cancer and their high content in omegas. Skillet salmon accompanied by a pink risotto made with oatmeal cream and presented with carrots in plum oil, broccoli, and grilled cauliflower, is the dish that Chef Raul Alvarado will prepare for this season, decorated with spinach and pomegranate the dish with green tea and citronella sauce made from soy milk. At the end of their gastronomic experience, guests will receive a pink macaron as a symbol of awareness.

For each cocktail and salmon sold during the month of October, The Ritz-Carlton, Cancun will donate a percentage of the earnings to the nonprofit organization “Tomatelo a Pecho”, whose main objective is to help reduce the lethality of breast cancer, through of early detection and its effective treatment.
